Paws for the President

Dear Members and Friends—

Is anyone out there with initials other than "LWS" who will be Obedience Trial Chair? The Palm Reader was booked solid, so I continue to reach out to you. Can't hurt to keep trying!!!

Moving right along— thanks to Luane for co-coordinating the AOCNC Workshop ring and to her helpers Lynnette, Anita, Dolores—we appreciate your representation of MBDTCl!

Coming up— our March General Meeting— the 17th— green is not essential but an appetite is! Just bring yourselves and enjoy. Please refresh your memories regarding our vote on the Hot Dog Award Calculations published in the January and February Ruff Notes— secret ballot will be held to determine which method will be used in the future.

Other than that— things are rolling along quite nicely for our VST Tracking Test on May 4; Agility in June; Obedience Workshop for June 28— which reminds me..

You will also be asked to vote at our March meeting to move our Annual Meeting, which this year would have been July 5, to correspond with our Obedience Workshop which was moved to June 28.

Our Obedience Trial is set for "Back-To-Back" with the Dog Training Club of Salinas Valley— they August 2 and we August 3. Some discussion will be held regarding some housekeeping details related to that event.

Thanks to all for all you do!!

"Most dog owners are at length able to teach themselves to obey their dog."

—Robert Morley

Class Fees Discussion Upcoming

We'll do a comparison of class fees with other reputable trainers in the county—it might be time to seriously consider increasing our class fees. Think about it and be ready to discuss it at the March meeting—just discuss it—no action to be taken!

Canine Courage: The Heroism of Dogs

by Tiffin Shewmake

A Book Review by Marilyn Runyan

Why do dogs help people? This is a question many ask when they hear tales of dogs who have performed heroic acts, sometimes at the risk of their own lives. This book attempts to explain some of the factors which have created the relationships which have arisen between dogs and people.

There are numerous tales of specific acts of heroism performed by dogs. The one which most caught my attention was that of Reona, the Rottweiler owned by Jim and Betty Patton. Those of you who were club members at the time of the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake remember Reona's story. She saved the life of a 7-year-old girl who lived near the Pattons. As a result, I nominated her for the Kennel Ration Dog Hero of the Year award—which she won!!!!

There are many stories of other dogs who have saved lives, provided needed services, and generally have performed remarkable acts.

In addition to tales of heroism, Shewmake provides background information and theories which make interesting and informative reading. Our own Pam Strametz is also quoted relative to the devotion of different breeds of dogs.

(Canine Courage continued on page 9)

Question?

When dogs sniff the ground where other dogs have been, they are looking for messages about other dogs' sex, health, etc. Do you know what that is called?

Fee-mail: ANSWER!

Subject: Border Crossing

The Canadian Border is now asking for the Dogs Registration papers, and are matching them up to the Rabies Certificate. They are also stating to the US exhibitors that they must have the same number of dogs returning with them to the US upon their return. Please forward this information to as many US exhibitors coming up for the show as possible.

Cheers,
Sylvia Lawton

Nominations Coming

The Nominating Committee for next year's Board members is composed of Kim Sutherland, Pam Strametz, and Stacy Thompson.

Their task is to come up with a slate of Board members who will work well together in advancing the Club's activities and philosophy.

If you are asked to accept a nomination, please give it serious consideration and say "Yes".

Famous Folks and Their Canine Therapists

via Front and Finish, November 2000

Throughout time, some history-makers have shared a common link: Their most loyal listeners were their dogs.

"Dogs have served as confidants and escape valves for very significant people for centuries," says Stanley Coren, Ph.D., dog expert and psychology professor at the University of British Columbia, Vancouver.

Coren spent months researching the therapeutic benefits of dogs paired with the famous and infamous. He shares his findings in his latest book, The Pawprints of History: Dogs and the Course of Human Events (Free Press, 2002, $26). A sampling:

When Mary Queen of Scots was imprisoned in the Castle of Fotheringhay in England, she was denied human contact except for a priest and a servant woman. But she was allowed to interact with her terrier, Geddon. As she approached the gallows to be beheaded, she walked in a measured, stately manner. "What wasn't well-known is that she had hidden her dog under her long skirt when marched to her death because she wanted that dog to be with her the moment she was to die," Coren writes.

During World War II, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower wrote to his wife, Mamie, about his North Africa tour, often commenting on how much he appreciated having his Scottish Terrier, Caicca, by his side. "He told his wife that his dog was the only companion he could really talk to and the only one who would not turn the conversation back to the topic of war."

To boost President Bill Clinton's family image when his daughter Chelsea left Washington to attend Stanford University, advisers recommended that he adopt a dog. They instructed Clinton to get a "popular breed like a Labrador Retriever and to make sure it was a chocolate Lab, not a black Lab that doesn't photograph so well," Coren writes. "When the presidential helicopter would land at the White House, Buddy, his faithful Lab, was always there to greet Clinton."

A Stump for a Tail

via Peggy Martini

You can't buy loyalty, they say
I bought it, though, the other day;
You can't buy friendship, tried and true,
Well, just the same, I bought that too.
I made my bid, and on the spot
Bought love and faith and a whole job lot
Of happiness, so all in all,
The purchase price was pretty small.
I bought a single trusting heart,

That gave devotion from the start.

If you think these things are not for sale,

Buy a brown-eyed puppy with a stump for a tail.

10 Warning Signs of Cancer

via Dog Fancy

Successful treatment hinges on catching cancer early. If you spot any of these symptoms in your dog, schedule an exam with your veterinarian.

- Abnormal lumps or bumps that persist or continue to grow
- Sores that do not heal
- Unexplained weight loss
- Loss of appetite
- Bleeding or discharge from any body cavity
- Bad odor, especially from the mouth
- Difficulty swallowing or eating
- Reluctance to play or constant fatigue
- Persistent stiffness or lameness
- Difficulty urinating, defecating or breathing

Agility Hot Dog Awards: One More Thought

Marilyn Runyan

While compiling and calculating this month's Agility Hot Dog Awards, something occurred to me that gives one pause for thought as to the proposed change in the manner in which the Hot Dog is determined.

At the present time, score is considered first (100 is full score), then the comparison of the time elapsed with the time allowed is converted into a percentage. The lower the score, the better the score.

It is proposed that this be changed to highest yards per second (after considering the score).

What I noticed was what happened when comparing Standard speeds with Jumpers speeds. One dog had a speed score of about 80% in Standard and about 87% in Jumpers. This should mean that the 80% score in Standard was the best. However, when you consider yards per second, the 80% run was 3.17 yards per second; the 87% was 4.07 yards per second.

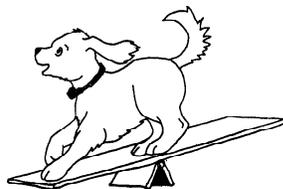

How could this be? Something must have been calculated incorrectly! But NO. The calculations were correct. Well, I took a look at the agility regulations and realized that the speed requirement to qualify in every class is such that the Standard course requires fewer yards per second. Why? Well, there is the 5" pause at the pause table. Also, the contact obstacles generally require slower speeds than the jumps require.

Under the proposed change to yards per second, the Jumpers will always have an advantage. In the example above, the scores shown give opposing results. The dog that did the best using the actual time used compared with the time allowed by AKC regulations indicates that the 80% score is better than the 87% score. Using the proposed change to yards per second, the Standard dog's 3.17 yps loses out to the Jumpers dog's 4.07 yps.

In determining the standard course time for the various classes (Standard and Jumpers), AKC allows for the contact obstacles and the pause table (wherein the dogs must sit or down for 5"). Comparing yps for Standard and for Jumpers is not realistic. Comparing the time actually taken to run the course to the standard course time is fair to all dogs in the classes.

There has also been a complaint that using the Preferred class scores for the Hot Dog Award is unfair to the regular Standard and regular Jumpers dogs since the Preferred dogs jump 4" less and have a slower speed requirement. There is validity in this position since the regular Standard and regular Jumpers dogs are also eligible for the Preferred classes.

My recommendation is that the method of determining the monthly Hot Dog winners NOT be changed but that the Preferred classes be excluded from consideration.

I Only Wanted You

A million times I needed you,
a million times I cried.
If love alone could have saved you
you never would have died.

In life I loved you dearly,
In death I love you still.
In my heart you hold a place
no one could ever fill.

If tears could build a stairway
and heartache make a lane,
I'd walk the path to heaven
and bring you back again.

Our family chain is broken,
and nothing seems the same.
But as God calls us one by one,
the chain will link again.

a quickly vanishing look of amazed contempt, and I am convinced that basically dogs think humans are nuts."

Brain Teaser

via Front and Finish by Johnny

On days like these we need something to stimulate our little grey cells, and I have just the brain game to brighten such gloomy skies.

Adages are collections of words that allegorically paint a picture. We've heard them all of our lives and some of them have fallen into the realm of clichés. This game, or translation exercise, tests how well you can "translate" pedantic vocabulary into the everyday adages that you know so well. For example, freedom from guile or fraud constitutes the most excellent principle of procedure. Translation: Honesty is the best policy. Kind of neat, isn't it?

The following nineteen adages are relatively common. See if you can "translate" them into everyday English. Answers are found at the end of the article. No cheating!!

1. Similar sire, similar scion.
2. Precipitancy creates prodigality.
3. Mendicants are prevented from determining preferable alternatives.
4. Tenants of vitreous abodes ought to hurl no lithoidal fragments.
5. Compute not your immature gallinaceans prior to their being produced.
6. It is fruitless to become lachrymose because of scattered lacteal fluid.
7. Cleave gramineous matter for fodder during the period that the orb of the day is refulgent.

8. Pulchritude does not extend below the surface of the derma.
9. Failure to be present causes the vital organ to become more enamored.
10. Every object which coruscates is not fashioned from aureate metal.
11. Each canine passes through his period of pre-eminence.
12. Consolidated you and I maintain ourselves erect; separated we defer to the law of gravity.
13. You cannot estimate the value of the contents of a bound, printed narrative or record from its exterior vesture.
14. Folks deficient in ordinary judgment scurryingly enter areas on which celestial beings dread to set foot.
15. Liquid relish for the female anserine fowl is the individual condiment for the male.
16. A feathered creature clasped firmly in the manual members is equal in value to a brace in the bosky growth.
17. The individual of the Class aves arriving before appointed time, seizes the invertebrate animal of the group vermes.
18. Socially oriented feathered vertebrates of similar plumage tend to congregate in gregariously homogenous groupings.
19. One may address a member of the Equidae family toward aqueous libation, but one is incapable of compelling him to quaff.

Answers to Brain Teasers

1. Like father, like son.
2. Haste makes waste.
3. Beggars can't be choosers.

10 Very Common Mistakes—and how to avoid them

(summarized)

by Ardeen Moore
via Dog Fancy, April 2002

Dogs don't come with owners' manuals, but all it takes is time, patience, and a little advice to avoid the pitfalls of "parenting" that can cause poor behavior.

Mistake: Failing to enroll in puppy kindergarten or obedience training

Dogs must learn manners and social skills. "Dogs are visual learners," Kerry Muhovich, DVM says. "They learn by watching appropriate behaviors being rewarded in other dogs. Doggie see, doggie want to do."

Mistake: Lacking proper instruction and not rewarding good behavior

Physical punishment or stern tones resolve none of the underlying causes of misbehavior. In fact, they can lead to an aggressive or fearful dog, Terry Long, professional dog trainer says.

Mistake: Having little information about breed tendencies and needs

Looks and size alone don't make a dog the right one for you. In domesticating dogs, people have bred certain personality and temperament traits into each breed.

Mistake: Thinking that dogs can live alone outdoors

Dogs are social animals that thrive in packs. Even if you have a well-equipped, fenced backyard, your dog needs human interaction. Isolated dogs tend to escape, bark, dig, and greet visitors too excitedly.

Mistake: Providing insufficient exercise

Dogs need an outlet for their energy. Inadequate regular exercise creates a chubby, bored, mischief-making dog. Non-stop barking, chewing, or digging often results.

Mistake: Not providing an indoor den

Dogs need bedding in quiet places they can call their own. Anxiety and nervousness can arise in a dog that cannot escape to a safe haven free of rambunctious children and other household activity.

Mistake: Letting your dog think it leads the pack

At first, you might not mind if your dog commandeers your favorite recliner or steals your pillow at bedtime. But this could lead your dog to view itself as the leader of the household and growl, snap, or even bite when you try to oust it from the recliner or wrestle back your pillow.

Mistake: Offering long, guilt-ridden goodbyes

When you make a big deal of your exit (showing your dog with hugs, sweet talk, and apologies), it sets the stage for separation anxiety, often displayed by house-soiling, destructiveness, constant barking, or panic-filled pacing.

Mistake: Feeding table scraps

If you feed table scraps, your dog will recognize that when people gather around the dining room table, lip-smacking goodies come next.

Mistake: Having unrealistic expectations

Dogs, like people, need to learn acceptable behavior.

How Dogs Are Better Than Men:

from the Internet via Vicki Dudley

1. Dogs do not have problems expressing affection in public.
2. Dogs miss you when you're gone.
3. Dogs feel guilty when they've done something wrong.
4. Dogs admit when they're jealous.
5. Dogs are very direct about wanting to go out.
6. Dogs do not play games with you -- except fetch (and they never laugh at how you throw).
7. You can train a dog.
8. Dogs are easy to buy for.
9. The worst social disease you can get from dogs is fleas.
10. Dogs understand what "no" means.
11. Dogs mean it when they kiss you.

I chuckled, I laughed out loud, I marvelled, and I shed a few tears reading this book. I can recommend the book to those of you who would enjoy hearing about the heroism of dogs and/or those who would like to learn about the devotion of dogs, cooperation between dogs and other animals, and ESP in dogs.

The book is available from Ingram Distribution, Baker & Taylor, Inc. and all major on-line bookstores for $15.
